

Kenneth Geller is a leading member of the Supreme Court & Appellate practice at Mayer Brown LLP. He has written or edited some 300 briefs and certiorari petitions in the US Supreme Court, has argued more than 40 cases in the Supreme Court, and has briefed and argued cases in most of the US courts of appeals and many state supreme courts. Chambers USA has described Ken as “both incredibly organized and wonderfully clear. He is superb when you need someone to take a highly complex area of law and distill it to its essence.”

Ken joined Mayer Brown in 1986, served as Managing Partner of the Firm from 2009-2018, and was a member of the Firm’s Management Committee from 1995 to 2018.

Prior to joining Mayer Brown, Ken served as Deputy Solicitor General in the US Department of Justice (1979-1986) and as Assistant to the Solicitor General (1975-1979). In 1983, while serving as Deputy Solicitor General, Ken received the Presidential Award for Distinguished Service in the field of law. Between 1973 and 1975, he worked as an Assistant Special Prosecutor for the federal government’s Watergate Special Prosecution Force and was involved in trial, grand jury and appellate work related to the Watergate criminal prosecutions. Previously, he worked with a law firm in New York and, between 1971 and 1972, served as Law Clerk to The Honorable Walter R. Mansfield, US Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Ken is co-author of Supreme Court Practice (11th ed. 2019), the preeminent treatise in its field, as well as the Supreme Court chapters in Business and Commercial Litigation in Federal Courts (3d ed. 2011) and Federal Appellate Practice (3rd ed. 2018). He is particularly experienced in the areas of federal preemption of state law (see, e.g., Buckman Co. v. Plaintiffs’ Legal Committee, 531 U.S. 341 (2001); Bryant v. Medtronic, Inc., 623 F.3d 1200 (8th Cir. 2010)), constitutional law (see, e.g., American Insurance Ass’n v. Garamendi, 539 U.S. 396 (2003)), and judicial review of administrative action (see, e.g., Heckler v. Chaney, 470 U.S. 821 (1985); SEC v. O’Brien, 467 U.S. 735 (1984)). Ken is a frequent speaker at conferences on appellate advocacy, Supreme Court practice and product liability law, especially federal preemption of state tort claims.
